

SUMMER STEPHAN, ON NOTICE AGAIN

District Attorney Summer Stephan,

I am placing your office on notice again because what is happening to me and my family has gone far beyond an ordinary disagreement with Child Welfare Services. I am 68 years old, a law-abiding senior citizen, and the paternal grandfather of Malaika and Xayah Robinson. I have spent more than two years advocating for my granddaughters, preserving evidence, speaking publicly, filing appeals, contacting oversight agencies, and trying to keep this family together. I have not committed crimes.

Yet I continue to face an expanding series of government actions involving multiple agencies and legal proceedings. Social workers, attorneys, County Counsel, Children's Legal Services personnel, RFA personnel, restraining-order proceedings, dependency proceedings, and appellate proceedings have all become part of a continuing battle that I am being forced to defend.

I appealed the restraining order and lost. I now have to seek review in the California Supreme Court and pursue whatever lawful federal remedies remain available. At the same time, approximately six months after I challenged the attempt to rescind my Resource Family Approval, the State has escalated that matter again through the California Department of Social Services Legal Division, with Senior Staff Attorney Pamela R. Lacey pursuing a formal Accusation against me.

It does not stop. I thought at some point the government would back away and allow me to live what remains of my golden years without being dragged into another hearing, another filing, another accusation, another administrative proceeding, or another court fight. Instead, each time one proceeding ends, another appears. I am one grandfather facing government actors and attorneys across multiple levels of the system while nobody appears willing to independently examine why this is happening.

The common thread is that I refuse to stop speaking publicly, exposing the conduct of those responsible, or demanding accountability for what is happening to my granddaughters and family. I was approved as a Resource Family through California's RFA process. I supported Evelyn financially, transported her to visits, helped keep her and the children housed, participated in visits, sought family placement, and continue advocating while the children are being kept from their family. Public advocacy, blogs, photographs, podcasts, flyers, QR codes, recordings, and appearances before the Board of Supervisors then became part of the government narrative against me.

I contend that this is retaliation for protected speech and advocacy. Accusations against me keep changing, with new theories appearing and old claims weakening. We dispute these allegations with recordings, documents, witnesses, affidavits, declarations, and contemporaneous evidence.

I have been portrayed as dangerous, predatory, disruptive, and inappropriate, yet no prosecuting agency has charged me with the crimes those descriptions imply. So I want one point stated plainly.

If I committed a crime, charge me.

Put the accusation in a criminal complaint. Produce the evidence. Give me due process and a courtroom where witnesses can testify, accusations can be challenged, and the truth can be examined.

I will not accept years of being treated like a criminal through confidential reports, restraining orders, administrative accusations, and government proceedings without criminal charges or a meaningful opportunity to challenge the accusations.

These are my granddaughters. Advocating for them is not a crime. Criticizing government misconduct is not a crime. Publishing records and exposing wrongdoing, retaliation, and abuse of power inflicted upon our family is not a crime. What demands investigation and accountability is the continued separation of our children from their loving family, the termination of their mother's parental rights, and the grave miscarriage of justice that continues to devastate our family. Demanding accountability and refusing to abandon the children I love is not a crime.

Our underlying concerns have never disappeared. Malaika and Xayah have family available. I was an RFA-approved paternal relative. Their mother completed services and maintained a substantial bond with them. Expert testimony warned of catastrophic psychological and emotional harm from permanent severance. The family documented serious medical problems, including pneumonia requiring hospitalization, a urinary tract infection, severe hygiene neglect, and extreme separation distress. We repeatedly reported child abuse and sexual abuse concerns that demanded immediate investigation and protection. Instead, those concerns were swept aside, the children's safety and emotional well-being were disregarded, and the court terminated their mother's parental rights. Malaika and Xayah remain separated from their loving family despite the documented harm and the expert warnings of catastrophic consequences.

I demand an independent investigation into false reporting, fabrication, retaliation, abuse of government authority, concealment of child abuse concerns, interference with family relationships, and misuse of government proceedings against those who speak publicly.

This has also caused enormous harm to me as an elderly family member. What should have been my golden years have been consumed by hearings, filings, appeals, investigations, accusations, restraining orders, and administrative proceedings. My elderly mother, who was living with dementia, spent the final period of her life surrounded by the stress, anguish, and uncertainty of our family's ongoing separation. Despite her dementia, she could sense the emotional strain and distress we were experiencing, and it affected her deeply. She died while this fight was still consuming our family, without seeing her great-granddaughters returned to the home and family that loved them. The pressure did not end with her death. It continues and has expanded.

I am also reporting what I contend is child trafficking through government process because children with an available biological family have been systematically separated from that family while a non-relative placement continues to be advanced and defended. I understand the seriousness of that term. That is why I am asking your office to examine the evidence rather than dismiss the allegation because it arose inside a dependency case.

Dependency confidentiality does not create immunity from criminal investigation. It does not authorize fabrication, retaliation, falsification of records, concealment of abuse, perjury, case-fixing, or abuse of governmental power.

I demand that this notice be preserved with my prior correspondence and that the District Attorney's Office initiate a formal criminal investigation into the reported child abuse and sexual abuse, retaliation, fabricated accusations, obstruction of family reunification, and misuse of government authority. Examine the recordings, witness statements, and official records, investigate those responsible, and pursue appropriate criminal action wherever the evidence establishes violations of law. If your office declines jurisdiction, formally refer this complaint to the appropriate authority.

Recordings, reports, emails, texts, filings, changing allegations, restraining-order proceedings, RFA actions, medical evidence, witness evidence, dependency records, declarations, affidavits, and the chronology of government action are being preserved.

I am demanding justice, accountability, and an end to the ongoing retaliation and abuse of government authority against me and our family. There is no justification for punishing an elderly grandfather for protecting his granddaughters, exposing misconduct, and refusing to remain silent. The manufactured dangerous-grandfather narrative, retaliatory restraining orders, and relentless proceedings have inflicted enormous harm on our family while Malaika and Xayah continue to be separated from the people who love them. This grave miscarriage of justice must end. Stop the retaliation, restore our family bonds, and return our children to their loving family.

I will continue documenting and challenging these actions through every lawful avenue. Multiple letters, complaints, recordings, and supporting documents are already published online. This notice will also be preserved and made publicly available so our family's evidence and demands for accountability cannot be buried or forgotten.

I will not abandon Malaika and Xayah Robinson, surrender my right to speak publicly, or cease pursuing justice and accountability through every lawful avenue available to me. This matter remains unresolved, the harm continues, and our family deserves justice.
